The admission of his unwillingness to swear to the identity came at 'he ond of a long question by Mr. Littleton, comparing the times and conditions under which Matteossian testified he saw Mrs.
Stokes. The witness, who had testified also to seeing a photograph of "Mrs.

which Matteossian testified he saw Mrs. Stokes. The witness, who had testified also to seeling a photograph of "Mrs. Stokes" in Wallace's spartment, was shown a photograph which he said he didn't recall' having seen before. It was this photograph, the defence will contend, that was in the Wallace apartment.

Despite various roundabout methods of questioning, counsel for the defence could not get Matteossian to describe the exact spot of the extension of the house on which he stood when, as he testified, he saw Mrs. Stokes partly clothed, fixing her hair before a dressing table in the Wallace apartment.

So positive were the attorneys that he could not have seen what he said he diffrom the extension roof, and so sure were Herbert C. Smyth and Francis L. Wellman, Mr. Stokes's counsel, that he could, that both sides asked Justice Finch himself to go to the premises and decide, the delegated John O. Wingrave, his secretary's report does, not satisfy him as to the facts, the Justice said, he will go himself.

Mr. Stokes has paid him $100, Matteossian testified, but it was for expenses incurred in "making some drawings for a pipe dream." The witness, who is a draughtsman, said Mr. Stokes had instructed him to prepare sketches for a "commercial clubhouse," with a promise of work on it if it should be received the search of the should be received the work of the first property of the searched mr. Mr. Stokes has paid him $100, Matteossian testified, but it was for expenses incurred in "making some drawings for a pipe dream." The witness, who is a draughtsman, said Mr. Stokes had instructed him to prepare sketches for a "commercial clubhouse." with a promise of work on it if it should be erected. Mr. Stokes's counsels explained the sketches were for a reconstruction of the Manhattan Club, in which Mr. Stokes is much interested, so that it might rent rooms to members, as "it has not been paying since prohibition."

Mrs. Mabel Matteossian, wife of the witness, was to have been cross-examined also, but Mr. Stokes's counsel produced a physician's certificate of her illness.
